end and said device front face, said device is arranged such that the modulated light output from said modulator is propagating essentially in a direction, that is angle with respect to a normal of said device front face, said modulator output end is tapered, and said front face is angle with respect to said back face such that said modulated light is output from the device via said front face in a direction substantially parallel with a normal of said back facet in combination with the remaining limitations that comprises the claimed an optical device having a back facet and a front facet opposite to each other said device are neither disclosed nor suggested in any piece of available prior art, and therefore are neither anticipated nor obvious over the prior art of record.

Claims 20 – 28, 31, 32, 34 – 38 has been found allowable due to their dependency on claim 19.
